

“In A Few Words”

A message from the Managing Editor

Unfortunately it seems that I am only able to get something published once a year; nevertheless I am still here and will continue to send you peer reviewed material with importance to investigators. In this issue Dr. James D. Harnsberger and Dr. Harry Hollien are back with a follow up to their previous article on Deception as found in this journal Volume 5, Number 2, July 2013.

In this issue they will be “Assessing Deception by Voice Analysis Part II: The LVA”. This is extremely valuable for those involved with making determinations as to whether or not a person is being deceptive during question. These two authors are very well versed on the topic and have many years of research and practice on the topic.

The future of the Investigative Sciences Journal (ISJ) is in your hands. It is free and peer reviewed. I encourage all of my readers to submit your case studies, research or manuscripts of interest to investigators to the ISJ. I cannot guarantee that all of them will be published, however, if your submission meets the standard and the criticism of your peers, then you will see it in print soon after submission.

Please go to:

www.InvestigativeSciencesJournal.org or email me at editor@InvestigativeSciencesJournal.org.

Thank you.

James M. Adcock, PhD

James M. Adcock, PhD
Managing Editor